DISTRIBUTION STRATEGIES

Increase referrals with a consistent marketing strategy that includes the Quality of Life Matters newsletter. Content is vetted by our team of medical journalists and sourced from highly respected medical journals such as the Journal of the American Medical Association and the New England Journal of Medicine.

Tips for making Quality of Life Matters® a key part of your marketing plan:

1. Establish credibility.

- Be the authority on serious illness and end-of-life care education. Provide high-quality clinical content without dedicating weeks to research and development. We do it all for you.

2. Promote your brand.

- Maximize your brand recognition with a custom masthead. Highlight services or latest news on the fully customizable back page.
- Use each issue as an opportunity to engage. We know clinicians are busy. Even if they don't read every issue, your branded newsletter ensures your organization is seen.
- Distribute electronically. A PDF link of your newsletter is available, billed quarterly based on your recipient list. Contact us for details.

3. Build rapport.

- Prioritize your contacts. MDs, NPs, and PAs can benefit from the content. Also appropriate for directors of nursing, administrators, discharge planners, and social workers.

- Distribute to non-referring physicians to expand your referral base or send to existing referral sources to keep in touch.
- Build rapport with staff by hand delivering if possible. When it isn't possible, mail or email the newsletter with a personal message and touch base one week after.

4. Make it easy.

- Identify specific content that you want contacts to read. Highlight articles on broad and important findings, such as articles on symptom management, for all clinicians.
- Target specialists with articles about subspecialties; e.g., studies on heart disease may interest cardiologists.
- Focus on a targeted group each quarter (e.g., Q1, oncologists; Q2, hospitalists; etc.). Create specific messaging for each group to use throughout your marketing collateral.

Every copy of your branded newsletter is a valuable marketing touchpoint and a way for you to establish expertise among your colleagues.
Distribute regularly to see an increase in your referrals.
